TYSON

(Section One)

From the interesting letter-book of James Claypoole, William intimate friend, we learn that among the passengers on the "Concord," which was boarded at Gravesand for Philadelphia, July 24, 1683, were 33 "Dutchman," or Germans, from Crefeld, a city situate in the lower Rhine provinces, within a few miles of the Holland border.

On March 10, 1682, William Penn, the Proprietary, had conveyed to Jacob Telner, Jan Streypers, and Dirck Lipman, all of Crefeld, each 5000 acres of land to be laid out in Pennsylvania.

On June 11, 1683, Penn conveyed to Gonert Remke, Lenart Arets and Jacob Isaacs Van Bebber, all of Crefeld, 1000 acres each and they, with Telner, Streypers and Lipman, constituted the six original Crefeld purchasers of the site of Germantown, in the County of Philadelphia. These men had agreed with Penn to colonize that locality.

The thirteen men in the party, some heads of families and some single men, were--among others--Reynier Telsen.

These men were practically all of the Holland Dutch stock, and even though they were living within the borders of the Palatinate, were not Palatines, such as constituted the bulk of the later German emigration to Pennsylvania. This was not a peasant race, like those later Palatine immigrants, but a free burgher stock, akin to that which first settled New Netherlands, and early in the 17th century, had held sway on the Delaware.

Among the younger men of this little party was Reynier Tyson (born 1659), to use the orthography now generally employed by those writing of the Colonist. His connection with the other colonists was through his sister, who was the wife of Jan Streypers, mentioned above.

These German colonists located in that portion of Philadelphia County embracing the Borough of Germantown, which was incorporated by Penn in 1689. The document named Reynier Tyson as one of the incorporators. In 1692 he served as Burgess, and likewise in 1693, 1694 and 1696. He was also a member of a Coroner's Jury, June 24, 1701.

On March 1, 1700-1, he bought 250 acres in Abington township, in that portion of Philadelphia County which, in 1784, was set apart to constitute the county of Montgomery; and thither he removed and continued to reside there until his death, Sept. 27, 1745.

Tyson and his compatriots are said to have been Mennonites originally, but evidently became converts to the principles of the Society of Friends prior to their emigration to America.

In the year 1725 he was appointed an elder, and continued faithful in fulfilling the duties of the station until prevented by age. He was one of the signers of the address issued by the Quarterly Meeting of Philadelphia, and addressed to the London Yearly Meeting, bearing upon the historic Keith Controversy, which rent the Society of Friends. He first settled at Germantown, and later at Abington township, both the compass of Abington Monthly Meeting, so that all his efforts in religious affairs were accomplished within that body.

In Tyson's day Abington Monthly Meeting belonged to Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting. He was appointed by the former as a representative to the latter on Aug. 26, 1695, and through successive years to 1728. He was appointed an Overseer of Abington Particular Meeting, 1706-7, 09 and 1723-24.

The identity of Reynier Tyson's wife is not known, aside from the fact that her Christian name was Mary.

Reynier and Mary Tyson were the parents of nine children; Matthias, Isaac, Elizabeth, John, Abraham, Derrick, Sarah, Peter and Henry. The descendants of these nine children have been very numerous, and they have penetrated into various sections of the land. Largely, however, they have been identified with Montgomery county, the old Tyson homestead in Abington township being located there though Abington was still Philadelphia county at the time of the death of the immigrant ancestor.

Matthias Tyson, the eldest of the seven sons of Reynier Tyson, was born in Germantown, Aug. 31, 1686. His name, in Dutch, was properly Madtis, but translated into English, it is Matthias. In the next generation it was still further Anglicized into Matthew. He removed with his parents from Germantown to Abington township, where he continued to live the remainder of his days, dying there in April or May, 1727.

The minutes of the Abington Monthly Meeting of March 29, 1708-09, indicate his marriage as having taken place since the preceding monthly meeting to Mary Potts, of Germantown, daughter of John Potts, formerly of Llanidioes, Wales. The widow, in January 1732-3, married again, Thomas Fitzwater.

Twelve children were born to Matthias and Mary (Potts) Tyson, as follows: Margaret, Mary, Rynear, John, Sarah, Elizabeth, Isaac, Matthew, Martha, a second Elizabeth, a second Matthew, and a third Matthew.

Isaac Tyson, the seventh of the above twelve children, was born in Abington township, Oct. 20, 1718. He settled in Upper Dublin, then in Philadelphia county, within the limits of Horsham Meeting. Here he lived for many years, engaged chiefly in agricultural pursuits. At the close of the Revolution he removed to Maryland, as appears by a certificate dated Sept. 2, 1783, issued by the Horsham Monthly Meeting, Isaac Tyson continued his adherence to the religion of his father and grandfather, as a member of the Society of Friends.

Isaac Tyson married, at Abington Meeting, May 26, 1748-9, Esther Shoemaker, born Shoemakertown, Philadelphia, April 2, 1732, died in Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 8, 1796; the daughter of Isaac and Dorothy (Penrose) Shoemaker, and a granddaughter of George Shoemaker, a native of Germany, who arrived in Philadelphia, in the ship "Jeffries," March 20, 1686-7. She was also a granddaughter of Bartholomew Penrose, who came from England and settled in Philadelphia about 1700. The exact date of Isaac Tyson's death is not known.

They had ten children as follows: Elisha, Tacy, Enos, Jacob, Sarah, Nathan, Dorothy, Elizabeth, Jesse and George. All of these married but George Tyson, a Baltimore merchant, who died Oct. 11, 1819.

Elisha Tyson, the eldest of the above ten children, was born Feb. 18, 1750, in Upper Dublin township, Philadelphia county. He removed to Maryland ahead of his parents, and settled first at Jerico, near Little Falls of the Gunpowder River, and here he built a flour mill.

In 1781 he moved into the city of Baltimore, where he became an extensive merchant and miller, and built new mills at Jones' Falls, near what is now Druid Hill Park. He was one of the founders of the first Anti-Slavery Society in the State of Maryland, organized Sept. 8, 1799. He was also one of the five founders of a Society to furnish free medical relief to the poor, which in 1807, was incorporated by the name of the Baltimore General Dispensary.

The latter years of his life was devoted entirely to philanthropy and to the anti-slavery movement. He appeared frequently before the various judicial tribunals of his day in behalf of the negroes, and was largely instrumental in procuring the passage of several laws to help their condition.

Elisha Tyson was twice married, first, Nov. 28, 1772, to Mary Amos, daughter of William and Hannah Amos, who was born May 10, 1758, and died April 17, 1813. He married, secondly, Oct. 22, 1814, Margaret Cowman, who died without issue, Jan. 29, 1853. Elisha Tyson died Feb. 16, 1824.

They had ten children as follows: Isaac, Esther, Lucretia, William, Mary, Nathan, James, Sarah, Elisha and Deborah D.

Nathan Tyson, sixth of the above ten children, born Nov. 4, 1787, was, for many years, one of the most prominent figures in the business world of Baltimore. He was the first president of the Chamber of Commerce of that city; was an early director of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, and was foremost in other enterprises having in view the expansion of trade, and the upbuilding of the community in which he lived along progressive lines. He married, Sept. 27, 1815, Martha Ellicott, and died Jan. 6, 1867.

By the above marriage, there were twelve children, of whom only five married and left issue, namely, James Ellicott, Elizabeth Brooke, Henry, Frederick and Lucy--all of whom below.

James Ellicott Tyson, born Aug. 21, 1816, married (1) Sept. 23, 1847, Harriet S. Jolliffe, daughter of John and Frances (Helm) Jolliffe; (2) in 1867, Frances E. Williams. By the first marriage, there were three children as follows:

TYSON

(Section Two)

(Line of Cornelius Tyson--brother of Reynier Tyson)

Another branch of the TYSON family is the one descended from the brother of Reynier Tyson--mentioned previously--namely, Cornelius Tyson.

Among the later arrivals at Germantown from the little town of Crefeld on the Rhine, the place of nativity of most of the founders of that first German settlement on Pennsylvania soil, was Cornelius Tyson, born in Crefeld in 1650. The exact date of his arrival is 1684, and the records show him to have been a resident of Germantown in 1703. His will dated April 6, 1716, and probated July 27, 1716, mentions his wife Margaret, eldest son Matthias, youngest son Peter, and daughters Barbara, wife of Matthias Cunrads; Aeltje, wife of John Cunrads; Williamptje, wife of Paul Engle, and Yanicken, wife of Laurentz Hendricks. The witnesses were Willm. Striepers, Herman Groethausen and Francis Daniel Pastorius. The names of the children of Cornelius Tyson show that he was of Holland and not German origin, though born outside the limits of modern Netherlands. Of the sons-in-law of Cornelius Tyson, the Cunards were sons of Thones Cunders of Kunders, one of the original settlers of Germantown, and natives of Crefeld. They settled in Horsham township, where Matthias Cunrads died in 1726, and John Cunrads later, and both have left numerous descendant.

Paul Engle and Laurentz Hendricks, the other two sons-in-law of Cornelius Tyson, were both early purchasers of land in Bebber's township, as were their brothers-in-law Matthias and Peter Tyson, though the Engles were later residents of Bristol township, Philadelphia County, where the old homestead was later occupied by three or four generations of Tysons.

Paul Engle, born 1690, died Germantown, Pa., Oct. 15, 1769, married as above mentioned, Williamptje Tyson, born 1690, died Dec. 1, 1769, was the son of Paul Engle, died 1723, who settled in Germantown in 1698.

John Engle, son of the above Paul Engle, born Germantown, Pa., 1721, died there July 27, 1795. He married May 28, 1757, Anna Whitmore, born 1734, died Feb. 23, 1808.

Silas Engle, son of the above John Engle, born Germantown, Pa., April 12, 1765, died Berwick, Pa., Jan. 11, 1837, was a pioneer settler in Columbia County, Pa. He married in 1786, Susanna Longerberger, born about 1758, died Dec. 9, 1827.

Mary Engle, daughter of the above Silas Engle, born Briar Creek township, Columbia County, Pa., April 29, 1796, died Berwick, Pa., Oct. 8; 1880, married in 1814, John Craig, born about 1792, died about 1836, son of John Craig, British soldier in the American Revolution, and his wife, Elizabeth Ashby. Their daughter was Eliza Craig--as below.

Eliza Craig, born Berwick, Pa., March 29, 1822, died Allentown,

Pa., June 22, 1875, married 1842, Stephen Mansfield. The latter, born Derby, Conn., Jan. 1, 1808, died Bethany, Conn., Aug. 8, 1889; postmaster of Berwick, Pa., in 1845; the son of Jared and Eunice (Jennings) Mansfield; a descendant of Major Moses Mansfield of New Haven, Conn., who served in forty-two sessions of the General Court as Deputy, Asst. and Probate Judge and for whom the town of Mansfield, Conn., was named; and of Richard Mansfield, who came from Exeter, Devonshire, England, in 1639 and settled in New Haven colony. The latter married Gillian Drake in Exeter, Aug. 10, 1636, and who came with him to America.

John Clark Mansfield, son of the above Stephen and Eliza (Craig) Mansfield, born Berwick, Pa., Feb. 22, 1848, died Philadelphia, Pa., April 14, 1920; was a private in Co. C. 15th Conn. Vol. Inf. during the Civil War. He was captured at Weiser's Forks, North Carolina, and was a prisoner of war in Libby Prison, Richmond, Va., 1865; was commander Post 21 (Pa.) G.A.R., 1892. He married Oct. 5, 1874, Catherine Hoctor, bapt. Oct. 11, 1846, died Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 22, 1886, daughter of Michael Hoctor, born 1815, died Philadelphia, Pa., April 5, 1884, who came with his family from Parish of Borriskane, Tipperary County, Ireland, to Philadelphia, Pa., in 1858, and married at Borriskane, Feb. 27, 1843, Mary Brien, born 1815, died Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 20, 1878.

John Clark and Catherine (Hoctor) Mansfield, had three children as follows:

(1) John Clark Mansfield, born Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 11, 1875; educated at Temple College, Retired official U.S. Railway Mail Service. President, Board of Trustees, Pa. State Soldiers and Sailors Home, Erie, Pa.; Commissioner, Brandywine Battlefield Park Commission.
